

Frequently Asked Questions

I completed my Associate degree in early childhood a long time ago. Am I still eligible for this program?	Yes; however, in many cases, you may need to take additional coursework before you are eligible to transfer into a +2 program. You will want to schedule a time to chat with a faculty advisor at the community college and / or university level to go over your transcript and find out what, if any, additional classes you may have to take to be able to transfer into a +2 program.
I completed my Associate degree in a different state. Am I still eligible for this program?	Potentially; however, as with the scenario above, you may need to take additional coursework before you are eligible to transfer into a +2 program. You will want to schedule a time to chat with a faculty advisor at the community college and / or university level to go over your transcript and find out what, if any, additional classes you may have to take to be able to transfer into a +2 program.
I am enrolled in a different Associate degree program. Will I be eligible for this program?	If you enrolled under a previous year's course catalog and are taking coursework toward a slightly-different associate's degree in early childhood development, you may need to take additional coursework before you are eligible to transfer into a +2 program. You will want to schedule a time to chat with a faculty advisor at the community college and / or university level to go over your transcript and find out what, if any, additional classes you may have to take to be able to transfer into a +2 program.
I completed my Associate degree at a program that's not listed here? Am I still eligible?	Probably; however, you may need to take additional coursework before you are eligible to transfer into a +2 program. You will want to schedule a time to chat with a faculty advisor at the community college and / or university level to go over your transcript and find out what, if any, additional classes you may have to take to be able to transfer into a +2 program.
I would like to go straight into a 4-year school. Am I eligible for this program?	No. The 2+2 program is designed for students who have already obtained an associate degree in early childhood development. There are many other options for students who want to begin at the university level.
